

TIME TO RE-TIME -- Daylight-saving time will come to an end this weekend. At 2 a.m. Sunday morning, Oct. 30, is when the change takes place officially but only cabareters and night workers are likely to wait until that long before setting clocks and watches back an hour.

Daylight time beings in April and ends -- in this area anyway -- the last Sunday in October. Thus the working day will end in darkness but at least it will be light when one goes to his toil. Because it will be dark when most people will leave their place of employment late in the afternoon, motorists are reminded to use more caution and care.

The young lady starting the clock hands back on a trial run is Cathy Miller, of Tinley Park.

Foreign Exchange

Frankfort Girl AFS Candidate At L-W

Kathy Geuther, Lincoln-Way high school junior, has been selected by the local American Field Services Committee to represent the Lincoln-Way area in the foreign exchange student program.

Carol Sherwood, of Mokena, is the second choice of the local AFS group.

Kathy is now being considered by the National American Field Service Committee for possible placement in a foreign country next summer.

If she is approved by the parent AFS, it will be the third Lincoln-Way student to receive such honor in the past three years. Jane Berlin, Senior, spent the past summer in Argentina.

The candidates are selected on this basis: general personality, grades; tolerance and understanding; interest in current affairs; importance of the program to the candidate in terms of his future; potential contribution to the community by candidate.

Kathy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Geuther, of Frankfort.

Much consideration is placed upon a written statement by the

Kathy's statement: "...I love people and meeting them and coming to know the way they live and feel. Each is a wonderful opportunity in helping me to learn.

"I love beautiful things; music, the dance, as well as watching the sun rise or the fog set in. But there is also beauty in people and living and I hope I never stop looking for this or learning from it.

"It is hard to read about the tension in the world but I would rather be a part of that tension than to be ignorant of the things which are going on about me. There is so much to learn in order to meet the responsibilities that tomorrow will bring."

Both Geuther and Sherwood have above average grades in their first three years at Lincoln-Way.

It provides a complete layout for Sunday school needs, with rooms for a nursery, toddlers, kindergarten and primary; five large work rooms, kitchen facilities, office and work area and minister's study. The two story structure is 102 by 52 feet, extending to the north of the church. It is brick and cement block conforming to the design and appearance of the church. The second floor, after dedication, will be used for additional Sunday school rooms.

Members who were appointed to serve on the building committee were; Roy Kropp, president; Hans Mueller, vice-president; Mrs. Kenneth Fulton, secretary; Adolph Steen, Albert Lorenz, Henry Clark Jr., Mrs. Clarence Laufer, Mrs. Henry Clark and the Rev. William J. Reiman, ex-officio member.

Hold UNICEF Fund Drive This Week

This Halloween weekend little spoons and goblins; spacemen and withches will ring doorbells at Frankfort and town folks will hear "trick or treat for UNICEF". Sponsored locally by the Will County Ministers association and nationally by the United States commission for UNICEF, the fund program will be carried out the same time in some 10,000 other communities.

Last year American youngsters participated in the biggest project ever carried out by children to help children, and collected $1,500,000. Each penny received means 5 glasses of milk for a needy child overseas or the BCG vaccine to protect him from TB. A nickel's worth of UNICEF penicillin will cure a child of yaws, a crippling tropical disease.

UNICEF is not a give away program; assisted Government matches the aid they receive at least 2 1/2 times.

The modern tradition of sharing helps to make a better and healthier world for all the children including our own.

Identification tags and cartoons for your children to Trick or Treat for UNICEF may be obtained from Mrs. Jack Ewing, 123 Oak Street, Frankfort, Residents who are away from home at the time of the drive and wish to contribute may call Mrs. Ewing at Frankfort 4181 and she will arrange for your contribution to be picked up prior to announcement of the total fund.

Remember the trick is to treat all the world's children states Mrs. Ewing.

St. Jude Nuns Invite Public To New Convent Open House

An open house to show their new home to the public is to be held Sunday afternoon (Oct. 30) from 2 to 4 o'clock by the nuns who teach at St. Jude school, New Lenox, it was announced by Sister Mary Evelyn, C.M.F., superior of the sisters and principal of the school.

The nuns have been occupying a house which had been donated for convent use by the owner, Patrick Warren, on Haven avenue, until this month when they moved into their new quarters.

The new convent is at 241 W. Second avenue. It had been the home of Albert Schellenburg. The Robert G. Regan Construction Co., of Joliet, was awarded the contract for remodeling the place and building an addition to it. The construction cost amounted to approximately $46,000.

The outer walls have been faced with tan colored brick to match the exterior of the parish church, which is located only a few doors away.

The convent contains 15 rooms, eight of them bedrooms on the second floor. There is also a community room, a chapel, office space and, of course, kitchen and dining room.

The original St. Jude church at New Lenox was built in 1935. St. Jude school was built in 1950 and upon its completion a portion of the building was utilized for church purposes and original building sold to the Lions club of New Lenox and is now in use as a public meeting place.

The new church was built in 1955 so now the school building is used entirely as such.

The nuns who teach at the school belong to the Immaculate Heart Sisters whose motherhouse is at Tucson, Ariz. There are six nuns and two lay teachers that comprise the staff at St. Jude. There are 271 pupils in the school.

The public is invited to make a tour of the convent Sunday afternoon.

IN OPERETTA--Larry Lubway and Carol Spector, both of New Lenox and both seniors, are among the numerous reasons -- there are 65 youngsters in the cast--for one going to see "Ruddigore," a Gilbert and Sullivan piece that serves as a vehicle for some of their best work. The show is to be staged in the Lincoln-Way high school auditorium Nov. 4, 5, and 6, under the direction of Tom Olson, head of the vocal music department. Larry and Carol, it should be added, were just about to go into their gavotte when this picture was shot. Other pictures are inside. (L-W Photo)

Sponsors Talk On Welfare Bonds

Dr. John L. Cutler, superintendent of the Tinley Park state hospital is to be the speaker at a public meeting tomorrow night (Oct. 28) in the gymnasium of the Carpenter Street school at Mokena.

The meeting is sponsored by the Mokena Chamber of Commerce and is scheduled to begin at 7:30 o'clock.

According to William Tuttle, president of the Chamber, the meeting is being held that the public may learn at first hand of the needs of a proposed construction program to expand and improve the institutions for the care of the mentally ill.

Dr. Cutler's work and experience in this phase of public welfare gives authority to his words, it was pointed out. One of the small ballots to be handed voters in the general elections Nov. 8 will be one which would authorize a bond issue of $150-million to carry on a proposed state hospital building program.

This issue, as the bond issue for improving the plants of state universities, has the endorsement of the organizations of both major political parties.

Dr. Cutler and other familiar with the state mental health program have been speaking be-

"The Witch's Curse," A Tuneful Bit, To Play At Lincoln-Way, Nov. 4, 5, 6

"Ruddigore," also known as "The Witch's Curse," one of the works of Gilbert and Sullivan whose light operas have thrilled and delighted generations of those who like wit and music, is to be presented by the vocal music department of Lincoln-Way high school next week.

The operetta is to be staged in the school auditorium Friday and Saturday nights, Nov. 4 and 5, plus a matinee performance at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Nov. 6. Curtain time for the evening performances is 8 o'clock. Tom Olson, head of the vocal music department, is the director.

The cast is drawn from the ranks of the mixed chorus. It is a costly production but those in charge are pushing ticket sales and it was believed it would be a financial as well as an artistic success.

After expenses are met proceeds will be applied on the purchase of more robes for the chorus and to finish payments on the tape recorder which the chorus uses in rehearsals during the year so afterwards they can listen and iron out rough spots.

"Ruddigore" perhaps is not as well known as some of the other Gilbert and Sullivan productions but critics have long lauded it.

Sir William S. Gilbert was the librettist; Sir Arthur Sullivan the composer. Their light operas succeeded in satirizing grand opera, social customs and politics in so delightful a fashion that their productions still have the power to captivate. They created the patter song and that form is still with us.

"Ruddigore" is a mixture of intrigue and comedy in the G. & S. fashion that centers about the idea that the Baronets of Ruddigore, having been cursed by a witch, must commit a crime a day or die.

The principal roles adding to this plot are Robin Oakapple, disguised baronet played by Robert Breidert; his true love, Rose Maybud, (Carol Spector); Richard Dauntless, also a suitor for her hand (Larry Lubway); Sir Despard Murgatroyd, present baronet and tired of committing crimes (Gordon Case); his spurned love, Mad Margaret (Gail Gregory); Sir, Roderick Murgatroyd, dead these past 10 years but brought to life to help solve things (Jim Stanek); Roderick's former true love, Dame Hannah (Lorna Miller); Adam (Richard Osmus) a servant and professional bridesmaids Zorah and Ruth (Karin Geuther and Sue Blomquist) who are bound to get someone married off and a whole raft of soldiers, villagers, other bridesmaids, ghosts, stage hands, understudies, scenery painters and ushers.

There are 65 members in the cast. Melvin Donoho is the stage director, and Olson, of course, is in charge of the musical end. Accompanists Gene Cline, Gayle Harling and Sue Ann Shoop.

Administrators Act To Stop Teacher Pirating

Pirating of teachers is frowned upon by Illinois school administrators and at their fall conference held last week, at Rockton, a resolution was adopted to provide for the printing and circulation of a code of ethics. This code would be suitable for framing and it was recommended it be kept in mind by administrators.

Supt. A. Hunter Chapman, head of Lincoln-Way high school was chairman of the committee on ethics. Also on the committee from the area was Dr. John W. English, superintendent of the Joliet grade schools.

The code clarified at the Rockton meeting is aimed at administrators who tempt teachers who have signed contracts to come to their system thru the offer of more money or other advantages.

It is a common occurrence for applicants for teaching jobs to sign a contract at one school only to backout later. Sometimes the excuse is family illness or the opportunity to teach at home, or near home. Sometimes they come right out and say they have an offer of more money and can't afford to turn it down. Tampering with signed up teachers or encouraging them to bolt contracts by better offers is labeled plainly now as unethical.

Medical Society Plans District Meeting Oct. 30

Dr. H. Close Hesseltine of Chicago, president of the Illinois State Medical Society, will be the dinner speaker at a meeting of physicians from a seven-county area in northeastern Illinois, to be held in the Hotel Joliet, Joliet, Oct. 30. The occasion will be an 11th councilor district conference of the medical society.

"The purpose of the conference, the first in that area on a regional basis, is to inform county medical societies and their members how they can best serve the public," Dr. Bernard Klein of Joliet, 11th district councilor, said.

"Discussions will cover medical care, the relationships of the physician with his patient and his community, prepayment health insurance, and many other subjects."

The meeting will start at 2 o'clock, with Dr. Klein presiding. The speakers will be members of the medical society's headquarters staff in Chicago: Robert L. Richards, executive administrator; Donald L. Martin, director of public relations and field services; Roger N. White, director of medical services and economic research; Albert G. Boeck, director of publications and scientific activities, and Mrs. Frances Zimmer, executive assistant; also, Walter L. Ohlinger of Springfield, director of legislative activities and general counsel.

The county medical societies participating will be: DuPage, Ford, Grundy, Kankakee, Kendall, Iroquois, and Will.

Report Mokena Man As Booster Of Fidel Castro

A man identified as Merle Byers, South Woodland Circle, Mokena, made the national news services last week-end with a speech at Tampa, Fla.

The speech, delivered at a meeting of Castro supporters, was strongly pro-Castro and also anti-American, according to the news dispatch.

Byers, who last year sported a beard, was quoted by the news service as telling a meeting of the 26th of July movement that Cuba had "just cause" to be angry with the United States. The Cubans, he is alleged to have said, "are full of purpose" while the United States "is a society with no meaning or purpose".

According to the dispatch Byers is said to have identified himself as a representative of the U. S. Farm Association of Iowa.

Byers manufactures Men's jackets and at one time he made paint at the Woodland Manor Industries, profitable both for the Government and to the lessees, Colonel Smedlie stated. In this connection, he pointed out that it assures the maintenance of the land and, at the same time, assists in conserving its productive capacity.

Bid forms, as well as any additional information desired, may be obtained from the office of the Post Engineer at Joliet Arsenal. All leases will be for periods of two, five, or 10 years, beginning March 1, 1961.

Arsenal To Lease Land To Farmers

Plans for leasing to farmers 13 tracts of land attached to Joliet Arsenal, Joliet, were announced today by the Chicago District, U. S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Col. J. A. Smedlie, District Engineer, stated that bids for the lease of one or more of the tracts will be received at the office of the Post Engineer, Joliet Arsenal, until 1:30 p.m. Oct. 28, at which time they will be publicly opened. The 13 tracts total 3,809 acres.

Use of the land will be restricted, under the leasing arrangement, to production of hay, seed crops, and vegetable crops in conformance with the Administration's policy of prohibiting the production of price-supported crops in surplus supply on Government-owned land.

The policy of making land not presently required for defense purposes available for agricultural use has proved

Will Wash Cars To Raise Funds

The senior class at Lincoln-Way high school has two projects for which it needs money -- a gift for the school at commencement and to finance a day's trip at the end of the school year.

In order to get its start the class plans a car wash for this Saturday and Sunday. Girls as well as boys will be pressed into service. The car washing squads will be on duty all day Saturday, and in the afternoon on Sunday, Oct. 30.

The washing squads will center on traffic in four villages of the district, Manhattan, New Lenox, Mokena, and Frankfort, and also at Lincoln Estates.

L-W Home Ec. Dept. Gives Facts On "Wash And Wear"

With more and more of us wearing and caring for wash and wear garments perhaps this is the time to get more information about this product. First what does the term wash and wear really mean? There are three general types of fabric used in wash and wear garments: a natural fiber (usually cotton) which has been given a resin finish; a man made fiber (nylon, dacron, orlon, arnel, acrilan, etc.); or a blend of one of these man-made fibers with a natural fiber. In buying a wash and wear garment, it is important to remember that the fabric alone does not make a garment wash and wear. For example, a child's dress might be made from a fabric which has wash and wear characteristics, yet the buttons, pockets, trim, or other accessories might be made from fabrics which do not have wash and wear characteristics. Thus, the garment could not be satisfactorily worn, washed and worn again. We, the consumer, should also take notice of the fact that many finishers of textile fabrics would now prefer a more conservative name for these fabrics, such as "Easy Care" or "Minimum Care". We find many tags and labels stressing "little or no ironing". This is true for both the man-made fibers and with chemically finished cotton, although research shows that greater claims for wrinkle resistance can be made for the synthetics than for most of the resintreated cottons. Proper construction is vital in garments made from Wash and Wear fabrics. A plain seam, overcast, will provide better performance than a french or flat felled seam. If seams are puckered when new, laundering will not improve this condition. Wash and wear garments with a great deal of exposed stitching generally do not perform as well as those constructed with a minimum of visible stitchings. Garments with top stitching should also be avoided. Colorfastness is generally good in wash and wear fabrics, particularly in the resin treated cottons which will have the added protection of resin applied after the dyeing process. Size and shape should remain truer in wash and wear garments than in garments made from other fabrics. There is little give or stretch in wash and wear fabrics. By the same token most wash and wear garments should not have the seams let out. Needle holes are likely to be small rather than from small to large. Now what about the laundability of wash and wear? There are three major danger areas. First chlorine bleach cannot be used on many wash and wear fabrics. Weakening of the fabric, or yellowing of chlorine retentive finished fabric results. Secondly the acid sour bath used by SOME commercial laundries will remove resin finishes. Thirdly, the effects of excessive heat can be disastrous to many of the synthetic fibers. This would apply to washing, drying and ironing. What about the future of wash and wear? Since this is a relatively new item, it should be safe to predict improvements in all characteristics. Thru research and use, new finishes are being developed plus the fact that old ones are being improved. Blends will be improved through use of fibers which combine the good characteristics of the component fibers while minimizing their weakness. As one last hint, if resin rinsed white fabric turns yellow due to bleaching, Rit color remover may be used to whiten it. Oxygen-based bleaches "Snowy" designed for all fabrics can successfully be used on wash and wear.

Hospitalized 12 Years, Mental Patient Is Now Self-Sustaining

This is the fourth in a series of case histories from the files of the Tinley Park State Hospital, compiled by hospital personnel in the interest of informing the public on the need of voting favorably for the $150 million bond issue for the Illinois Department of Public Welfare.

This case history is an example of how the present trend of hospitalization for mental patients actually aids in total recovery.

Many research studies have revealed that after several effects of excessive heat can be disastrous to many of the synthetic fibers. This would apply to washing, drying and ironing.

What about the future of wash and wear? Since this is a relatively new item, it should be safe to predict improvements in all characteristics. Thru research and use, new finishes are being developed plus the fact that old ones are being improved. Blends will be improved through use of fibers which combine the good characteristics of the component fibers while minimizing their weakness.

As one last hint, if resin rinsed white fabric turns yellow due to bleaching, Rit color remover may be used to whiten it. Oxygen-based bleaches "Snowy" designed for all fabrics can successfully be used on wash and wear.

years of hospitalization, patients tend to adjust to the atmosphere of the hospital and find it rather difficult to leave. Shorter hospitalization also makes it possible to relieve the over-crowdedness of state institutions. The Tinley State hospital is presently being utilized to relieve to some extent the over-crowdedness of other state hospital.

Mrs. F.B., a former patient, is now helping an elderly couple in some domestic duties in return for her room and board after being hospitalized four times. She was transferred to the Tinley hospital from Kankakee State hospital in 1953. Mrs. F. B. is now 54 years old, of Swedish extraction, who was born in the city of Chicago. Twelve years ago she was hit by a speeding car, sustaining an injury to the brain and suffering partial paralysis of the lower left side.

Following the accident, she was noticed to have lost her memory and became somewhat delusional and exhibiting bizarre behavior.

The brain injury produced pathology in the nervous system causing organic defects and precipitating the mental symptoms which necessitated her admission to a mental hospital.

Married at the age of 17, and divorced after five years, she subsequently had four other marriages, all of which ended in divorce.

According to the records, it is quite evident that F.B. was emotionally unstable and too inadequate to face the challenges and responsibilities of married life.

Over the past couple of years, F.B. was found to be adjusting well in the hospital since she was participating rather adequately in various occupational and recreational activities within the limitations imposed upon her by her physical handicap.

She was approved for a wage placement plan under the Department of Public Welfare Family Care program.

The purpose of this program is to help improved patients whose relatives are unable to care for them or who have no relatives to whom they can return, to become contributing members of a normal community.

She was supervised for one year by the State hospital outpatient clinic while performing certain domestic duties in one of the homes in return for her room and board and spending money. After a successful year in this placement she was given an absolute discharge.

In the opinion of the vast majority of the members of the state legislature, the Governor and many experts, the bond issue represents the best method of financing the desperately needed capital improvements in Illinois public welfare institutions.

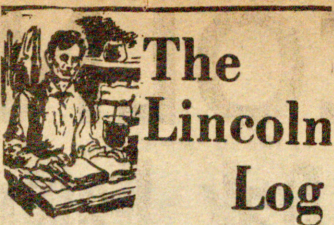

It is felt that needs which have accumulated over a half century of inaction, cannot be met using a long range program of construction geared to the year-by-year ability to appropriate cash out of general tax funds. The only other alternative is a substantial increase in present taxes and new taxes.

Economists say the bond issue will be less costly than a building program geared to the ability to pay cash.

Construction costs have risen more than five percent annually over the past two decades and are still rising. It will be less costly at this rate to borrow money at four percent interest and build on a "pay as you benefit from use" basis.

It is imperative that the crisis in Illinois public welfare institutions be met now. The costs of maintenance and repair are rising rapidly in ratio to the age of the buildings. The costs of personnel just to hold the threats of fire and epidemic at bay are multiplying rapidly.

The inadequate conditions aggravate the mental illness of some patients and substantially delay recovery rates. Hospital stays are lengthened, placing

In order to pass, the bond issue must receive a majority of the total votes cast for members of the General Assembly in the 1960 general election.

In 1958 a similar bond issue, coupled with a bond issue for educational construction, received 1,561,701 "yes" votes over 1,276,184 "no" votes—a majority of 185,517. However, the proposal failed to pass because 472,023 people who voted for members of the General Assembly failed to vote on the bond issue.

in the community. They will review with the man in the family the rules for safe operation of corn harvesting equipment, reminding him that his responsibility includes his family and his community. A farmer who agrees to follow these rules will have a "Safe Operator" sticker placed on his tractor.

The farm housewife will receive a "Remember" card to place on the dining table to remind all who gather there that safety is a family affair. An attractive sign posted on the gate post will serve as an outward sign of the farm family's cooperation in the FFA Safe Corn Harvest Program.

"Farm Equipment is designed for safe operation, but the operator must follow safe operating rules," says Bob Manzke, President of the Lincoln-Way Chapter. Efforts of the FFA members in the state along with those of many other interested organizations, individuals and farm equipment dealers, are cutting down the number of corn harvest accidents.

LINCOLN WAY EAGLES TIE FOR LEAD

Sandburg, Oak Lawn End In 12 To 12 Deadlock

Homecoming at Carl Sandburg high school last Saturday could have been a lot more joyous had the varsity football team plowed Oak Lawn under and give the Eagles undisputed lead of the Southwest Suburban Conference.

On the other hand it could have been quite a gloomy affair had Sandburg lost.

As it was the Eagles and the Oak Lawns played a tie game with the final score 12 to 12, and Sandburg and Lincoln-Way are tied for the league lead with three wins, one defeat and one tie each.

The Eagles will meet Reavis under the lights on the Reavis field tomorrow night. Reavis has lost twice, dropping its games last week-end to Rich, 6 to 0 and will be striving to drag Sandburg down to its level.

Coach Joe Devine, the Sandburg mentor, like his fellow coaches in the Southwest Suburban conference, could be beginning to twitch in his sleep these nights and it would be surprising if he wasn't. A win or loss now among the leaders could mean the league title so the pressure is building up.

Last Saturday's game with Oak Lawn was a ding-dong affair that could have been Sandburg's but for breaks. The wind was a handicap to both teams. It came whirling in from the south and inasmuch as the Eagles' field runs north and south the south goal was tough to reach. It was nice for the team kicking with the wind but punting against it was quite a chore. Throwing was difficult too. Even with the wind back of him a passer had to have luck with him too.

The wind did funny things to passes as well as punts. It carried some too far, it made others dip and veer. The first period ended without a score by either team. Then in the second quarter Sandburg began putting yards and downs together and by half time had piled up 12 points. On the first tally the Eagles pushed the ball down to the two from where Busch lugged it over for the touchdown.

The other counter was one of these things that brings the fans up cheering and jumping. Jeffries fielded a punt and with some good blocking and fancy side slipping carried it over the goal line after a jaunt of 50 yards.

Oak Lawn cut Sandburg's lead in two just before the second quarter ended on a 12 yard pass tossed by Byrne and caught by Thompson.

Neither team scored in the third frame and toward the end of the final period the Oaks made another touchdown. They had been held for down and had kicked to Sandburg, down around the 40-yard stripe, Sandburg started to march but fumbled. Oak Lawn recovered on the Eagles' 35 and started pushing for goal. They got down to the seven and Shutay carried it over from there.

Sandburg put a series of downs together after the kickoff and had worked the ball down beyond the Oaks' 20 when time ran out.

The varsity game with Reavis tomorrow night is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock.

Sportsmen Seek Name For Club Area Site

The directors of the New Lenox Sportsman's club have been seeking for a name for the area; not to take the place of the incorporated name but to serve as a name for the site. Several suggestions have been "Five Lakes," "The Dunkers," "Fish and Dip". Members may help by submitting a suggestion. The directors are also considering erecting a totem pole at the entrance to serve as a marker—does that give you any idea? Election of officers was held at their annual meeting last Thursday evening in the Lions Den with the present officers unanimously re-elected to serve another year; namely, Robert Banderbob, president; Dale Drake, vice-president; Stanley Ekedahl, secretary and Keith Hossack, treasurer.

Early American racing was under match conditions, the owners putting up "so much a side" in money, cotton, tobacco, land, or even the horse. The track was a field, a road, or perhaps the main street in town which in some cities, Philadelphia, for instance, is still known as Race Street. Later, when tracks were laid out and meetings organized, prize money, in races other than Sweepstakes, was hung in a purse in the winner's circle.

Owners still run for each other's money in Stakes races, putting up fees for each entry, but today the racetrack adds something to the pot. This "Added money" ranges from a few thousand to $150,000 in the case of the Preakness at Pimlico, and, in all but one notable exception, makes up the bulk of the prize. Oddly enough, the richest race in the world, the Garden State, at Garden State Park near Camden, N. J., does not offer the most added money. An event for 2-year-olds, on the last Saturday in October each year, it is run under "futures" conditions. Horses are nominated as yearlings, and an ultimate starter's fees total $2,565. Until this year Garden State Park added "only" $100,000 (in 1961 it will be $125,000) and in 1956 the gross value was a record $319,210, of which Calumet Farm's Barbaro took a winner's share of $168,430.

John Kropp's Play In Line Wins Award

Lincoln-Way center John Kropp, of Mokena has been named the Chicago area Line-man-of-the-Week.

John, a 17 year old senior received the honor from Chicago's American, the newspaper which gives the weekly award.

Kropp's name was submitted for his efforts in the game with Sandburg, Oct. 15 which the Knights lost by a 13-6 score. In addition to receiving a certificate of merit, John and Coach Jonas Lashmet will be honored guests at the banquet of the "Quarterback Club," which meets at the Morrison hotel.

A 25 to 12 victory over the Vikings of Homewood - Flossmoor, new addition to the Southwest Suburban Conference, has put Lincoln-Way back into a tie for top spot in the title race with Carl Sandburg.

The Knights of Lincoln-Way lost to Sandburg the previous week-end which made it a sad homecoming for the New Lenox school but a win over Flossmoor last Saturday while the Eagles were playing a 12-12 tie with Oak Lawn relieved some of the pain from which they were suffering.

Now the Knights and the Eagles have each won three games, lost one and tied one. Reavis and Rich are in the second spot, each with three wins and two losses. Lincoln-Way has beaten Reavis but has yet to face Rich, which has been showing more strength as the season has progressed.

But Coach Joe Kruzich believes in taking things one at a time so right now he and the team are concentrating on the game with Bremen, on the Bremen field, this coming Saturday afternoon. Game time is 2 o'clock. The Braves have had a miserable season but that doesn't prevent them from suddenly rising to their capabilities one of these days and massacring their enemies. The Knights know this and are preparing for a stiff battle Saturday. If Lincoln-Way is to win or share the football title in the conference this year it will have to keep right on winning. A defeat now could be fatal.

In the game played Saturday on the Flossmoor field, the Knights slashed their way over the ground for 339 yards and 17 first downs to 32 yards three first downs for their opponents. The Knights are weak on their aerials, however, and last Saturday was no exception. They completed one out of four attempted for a 13 yard gain. The Vikings completed three passes in nine tries for a total of 73 yards.

Lincoln-Way lost the ball three times on fumbles, Flossmoor once; Lincoln-Way was penalized 45 yards, Flossmoor, 25.

Dan Fenn, one of the scorchingest backfield men in the Joliet area, was at it again last week-end. He scored three touchdowns for Lincoln-Way and a conversion so all in all had a fine afternoon.

Glancing at the statistics one could be permitted to flutter his handkerchief and say to Mr. Fenn—"Nicely Done," as the lad had advanced the ball a total of 220 yards in 27 carries, or an average of 8.1 yards per try. That is nice going in any company.

Fenn has scored 58 points to date, a fact that makes him the top scorer in the area. In making his touchdowns Saturday Fenn made runs of 58, 4 and 7 yards and also ran a conversion after a touchdown. Wayne Lauffer counted L-W's other tally on an 11-yard reverse play.

The Vikings scored in the first quarter also on a 41-yard pass from Bob Allison to Ray Brower so the period ended with the score tied 6-6. The Knights added 13 points to their total in the second frame while holding their hosts scoreless. Allison slipped around an end for seven yards and a touchdown in the third frame in which the Knights failed to score.

Lincoln-Way accounted for another six points in the last quarter but Flossmoor was unable to connect.

In last week-end's conference games Evergreen Park, which has been improving steadily, trounced Bremen 27 to 6. Rich beat Reavis, 6-0.

NI-Gas Wins In National Competition

Northern Illinois Gas Company has won a first place in the fourth annual public relations achievement award competition sponsored by the American Gas Association.

The Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company of Chicago received an award of excellence for its entry in the field of press relations.

New Books In Mokena Library

BY MARCIA MILLER

Many new books have been added to the Mokena Library in the past month. Here are some of the adult selections.
"THE CHILD BUYER", by John Hersey, High on the current best seller lists, is this unusual and absorbing book about a corporation that bought talented children for its future progress.
A biting commentary on some aspects of American education and on the uses of high intelligence in our children.

"TRUSTEE FROM THE TOOLROOM", by Nevil Shute.
A real "find" in today's fiction, a happy book about a decent and resourceful man. This book is a well-spun yarn from the pen of one of our most popular fiction writers. A relaxing and delightful book.

"TIMOTHY DEXTER RE-VISITED", by John P. Mar-quand. A vivid re-creation of the life and times of New-buryport, Massachusetts in the 18th century. Thru this account of an eccentric town character Marquand brings alive the daily pattern of life as well as the high points of Colonial times.

"THE POISONS IN YOUR FOOD", by William Longgood.
A dramatic report on how some of the most powerful chemicals known to man have invaded your daily diet and what they may be doing to you. Also suggestions on what you can do to combat them.

Autumn Leaves Can Be Pretty, Also Hazardous

Autumn leaves are pretty on the trees, but they can be pretty dangerous on the roadway, motorists were warned today by Robert A. Campbell, Coordinator of the Illinois Division of Traffic Safety.

"Leaves turning all colors of the rainbow provide color galore in the autumnal foliage along country highways and some city streets, but falling to earth they become a threat to motoring safety in several ways," he pointed out.

"Children love to play in piles of raked-up leaves, sometimes even hiding in a large pile of leaves," he said. "This fun-loving activity can be of danger to motorists in parking in front of their homes and to the operators of delivery trucks."

In dry spells, home-owners like to rake leaves and burn them, he added. The smoke arising may be blown across a roadway throwing a smoke screen in front of approaching drivers.

"During wet spells, accumulations of leaves can become extremely slippery," the Coordinator pointed out.

Motorists are advised to be extra careful at this time when traveling along tree-lined streets or highways.

"The fallen leaves at this time should be taken as a signal of approaching colder weather, when it is important for every vehicle owner and operator to make sure his vital winter equipment is in appie-ple order," Campbell declared.

Tinley Lets Contract For Sewer System

The Tinley Park village board on Monday night awarded the contract for its proposed sanitary sewer system. It also voted to advertise for bids on the purchase of $1,325,000 of water and sewer revenue bonds to finance the program.

The contract was awarded to George D. Hardin, Chicago, whose bid was $3,442 higher than the low one. Hardin's bid was $1,038,279.

The other bid submitted was that of Boncar Const. Co., also of Chicago, $1,034,837.

In recommending award of the contract to Hardin, the chairman of the sewer committee, Trustee Allen Verhage, said the committee believed it was for the best interest of Tinley Park.

The vote on the award of the contract was unanimous.

It is not expected that work on the sewers will begin until the bonds are sold and the funds available.

A SUCCESSFUL HUNT -- Here the hunters of our story pose with three of the five deer bagged on the three-day weekend in Rock River country. From left are Ray Facchina, Forrest Birkett, Vic Berbonse, Ray Pueschel and author of the story, Art Schumann. Geoffrey Stoltz, the sixth member of the party was checking out a deer when the photo was taken.

Three Day Expedition Successful

Four-Footed Specter Of Rock River Area Challenges Deer Hunters

BY ART SCHUMANN

It was 2 a.m. when we backed out of the driveway and headed for Plainfield, where we were to meet the rest of our party. There would be six of us on the hunt, each anxious to get started on the opening day of Illinois' second white-tail deer season. Although the shotgun season for deer was to last only three days, Oct. 31, Nov. 1 and 2. During the season of 1958, we had been planning the trip for six months.

Each of our party had considerable practice firing the shotgun-rifled slug in order to determine its accuracy and its dependable range.

We all wanted to get deer but no one wanted wounded game to die lost in the field due to a poorly judged distance shot that was spent when it hit its mark.

THE HUNTERS

Our party consisted of Geoffrey Stoltz, 69 years young, and a crack shot. He had bagged a 263 lb. buck during Illinois' first deer season in 1957, that ranked with the largest deer taken in the state.

Vic Verbonse was a seasoned deer hunter who had spent many deer seasons in northern Minnesota and always got his deer. Vic had spent many hours throughout the summer discussing with the rest of our party the habits of the whitetail and of his experiences in the past while hunting them.

Forrest Birkett, Ray Pueschel, and Roy Facchina were going on their first big game hunt. All were seasoned small game hunters and good shots and as enthusiastic as a young boy on his first hunting trip with a new gun. I had been on one previous deer hunt, Illinois' first open season in 1957 with Geoffrey. My hunting experience prior to that had been limited to small game hunting, so that I too was green as a deer hunter.

Our whole party relied on Vic and his vast knowledge of the habits of the whitetail and let him decide on how our hunt should be conducted. By 2:30 a.m. our party had met at the intersection and we had enough gear to go on a three month safari rather than a three day hunt. We would take route 59 to 64 which would take us to Ogle County in northwestern Illinois, where we were to hunt.

It was but a two hour drive from our homes in Lockport and Joliet, approximately 90 miles one way. We were to hunt the Rock River Country, as it is commonly called by residents of northern Illinois. With the exception of a few state forests and refuges in southern Illinois the majority of deer range in the state is privately owned. For that reason it is necessary to gain permission from the landowner ahead of time in order to have a place to hunt.

SITE OF THE HUNT

Three months earlier we had visited the Rock River country and had decided to hunt the area between the towns of Byron and Oregon in Ogle county. This land is made up of a mixture of hardwood forests and farm land, much of which is in tall meadow grass.

Huge fields of corn abound throughout the area. The deer range far and wide by using the cover of the corn and the grass of the meadows going from one woods to the other at their leisure. Food is plentiful and the deer thrive. Ogle county had the largest deer kill during Illinois' first deer season in 1957 with 370 deer taken in three days of shotgun hunting. From information we had received from the local farmers, more twins had been seen in the spring of 1958 in the fields than at any other time. It was generally believed there were more deer in the county than there were before the 1957 deer season.

Our party was indeed fortunate to have the permission of a landowner who had a fine hardwood forest on his property with corn fields adjacent to and through the property. As we drove along Rt. 64 Geoffrey and I grew concerned over the amount of standing corn in the fields. It looked as though the deer would take to the standing corn for cover when the first shot was fired and it would be next impossible to get them out. Just before sunup, we arrived at our camp site which was about three quarters of a mile from the woods we intended to hunt. No one wished to take a chance that the noises of camp or the smell of camp food cooking would scare the game into the next county. Everyone got their gear together and at seven a.m. when the season officially opened we were ready to head for the hardwood stand.

RECONNOITER

Vic suggested that he first take a trip around the edges of the cornfields along the woods to determine whether the deer had been taking to the cornfields much of late. This proved a wise move as when he returned he told us that sign he had seen indicated that deer were walking along the edges of the corn to feed but had not penetrated into it. Cornstalks the deer had pulled down and stripped of corn were everywhere. Some half eaten ears were found far into the woods where they had been carried and half eaten at leisure. From the size of the tracks seen, Vic felt there were some unusually large deer in the area.

One set he mentioned were the largest he had ever seen. There may be hunters who can tell the difference between tracks of bucks and does, but there were none in our party. Vic is as experienced as they come and he would not venture a guess. His only comment was that there were large deer in the vicinity and the tracks were fresh. The skies were clear and the weather was warm, a typical Indian summer day.

As the shooting hours were from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m., Vic felt the deer would be bedded down for the day and they would have to be driven from their beds if we were to get any shooting. No one had any reason to disagree with Vic's knowledge of the habits of deer, so the drive was planned.

HIDE IN CORN

It was noted that there were several draws that led up out of the woods into the corn. Deer had walked these draws as sign clearly showed and would go into the corn at the first sign of danger in the woods. Once in the corn they would be safe. The corn was just dry enough that the slightest brush by the hunter would allow the deer to know the hunters location. In this way the whitetail would move around the corn all day without being seen.

WHITETAILS AT BREAKFAST--These deer, enjoying a wintery breakfast in leisure are all whitetails. This is the chief quarry of Northern Illinois deer hunters in the fall season. Farmers in the areas heavily populated with deer often leave patches of corn standing to help feed the winter herds.

As we hadn't enough men to drive the fields effectively, Vic suggested that two hunters be placed adjacent to two large draws that had well-marked deer trails thru them. By taking stands on the side of the hill approximately sixty yards from the corn fields if any deer were driven ahead of those doing the driving they might head up the draw for the safety of the corn.

Those of us who were to make the drive circled the woods and began the drive. The woods was full of deadfall. Thickets were everywhere and you were forced to break through them with every step. It appeared that the reason for the unusual amount of deadfall was due to the woods having been burned years before. Evidence of half-burned trees lay everywhere. The new growth grew heavily in the rich earth and some trees resembled pretzels in their appearance. Hills were everywhere and from the appearance of the woods it was ideal habitat for the whitetail. With the abundant rain fall of the spring the foliage was still green, little had fallen and the woods was almost dark in some areas even on a cloudless day.

Before we had spread out to make our drive we took a reading with a compass. With the thick foliage we would have to depend on it in order to keep moving in a straight line. We didn't want anyone to angle off in front of one of the others and perhaps be behind a deer that had gotten up in front of one of the other hunters. No deer is worth a possible serious injury or worse, to one of the party.

DRIVE BEGINS

After spacing ourselves we waited for a designated time and began our drive. No care was given to walking noiselessly. We moved ahead just fast enough to give the woods around us a good look before moving further. Within a short time three does got up and angled off to my left out of range showing me their white flags as they went over a hill.

I waited for a shot from one of our party but found out later that no one had a shot within range. The distance a rifled slug will carry is a good debate anytime, but after 100 yards it drops sharply. The does when seen were twice that distance. As the drive was continued occasionally the sound of a whitetail crashing through the woods in front of us could be heard. Often a glimpse of one could be seen and then as if it disappeared in thin air it was gone like a spectator.

Approximately 45 minutes later I came out on a hill overlooking a tall grassy meadow with a large draw along the bottom going into the woods. Two shots broke the stillness off to my left. I was sure that the large draw at the bottom of the meadow continued up the slope thru the woods and split in two near the cornfields where Forrest and Ray were making the stand.

After waiting for approximately fifteen minutes for the rest of those making the drive I felt that I had walked slower and they had come out ahead of me and walked up the draw to where the men on that stand were. I decided rather than walk up the draw myself I would walk along the side of the hill half way across the width of the meadow in the waist high grass.

A BIG BUCK

After rounding a bend I saw a tree that was bare of bark for a distance of four feet from the ground. It appeared that a buck had used the truck to rub his antlers on. It appeared to have been used recently as some freshly peeled bark was evident. Suddenly the grass in front of me exploded. The largest buck I had ever seen had leaped up and crashed into the draw before I could get the safety off my gun.

I was so intent on the appearance of the bucks rubbing tree that I failed to take a good look in the vicinity. The buck ran up the draw like a streak of lightning heading for the men on the stand. Apparently rather than go into the woods to the left he preferred the safety of the corn fields. There was not enough of him visible for a clear shot so I let him go, sure that one of our party on the stand would drop him. He was enormous and his rack appeared to be at least eleven points. I waited for a shot and none came. Either this was not the draw I had taken it for or the men had left the stands.

I walked over to the fresh bed and from the beaten earth about it, it appeared the buck had bedded here for some time. I walked on along the side of the hill towards the draw telling myself how I felt about me as a hunter for not looking the hillside over carefully before approaching the rubbing tree. As I walked uphill I caught a glimpse of a red coat and cap, it was Forrest. Why hadn't he fired at the buck it must have gone by him? As I drew nearer I saw all five of our party standing together talking. As I approached I asked why none had shot at the buck that had just gone by them. Vic pointed to the ground. The explanation was lying there and had just been field dressed by Vic. It was a seven point buck taken by Ray with those two shots I had heard earlier as I came out of the woods onto the meadow.

EXPENSIVE LESSON

The others driving had chased the buck up the draw the same as I had chased the larger buck. Ray said he saw him coming and dropped him at forty yards on the edge of the corn. All were surprised when I told them of the buck I had gotten up. It apparently had gone by them while they watched Vic dress out Ray's deer with their backs to the ravine. It was an expensive lesson for us and from that time through the next two days of hunting it was a standing rule not to leave a stand until the drive was completed by everyone. Vics' idea on how we should hunt paid off. We continued to make drives throughout the weekend taking turns driving and being on stands. This proved highly successful to our party as five bucks were taken by this method. Four of them were taken by those on stands and one by those driving. They were all taken within a distance of from 25 to 45 yard.

TWO BIG ONES

Two of the bucks were of good size and looked enough alike to be twins, one weighing 205 lbs. and a ten pointer; the other was 195 lbs. and a nine pointer. The other three taken were 10 lbs., 165 lbs., and 155 lbs. This was enough venison to last the six of us through the winter. The deer were, for the most part, taken in heavy thickets and deadfall. We used various methods to get them to camp. We dragged them by use of a rope over fallen leaves and at time had to cut poles and hang the deer from them. Neither of these methods are the best, as dragging them can bruise the meat and hanging them from poles makes a hard carry. Even a man walking alongside to steady the burden does not help to any degree.

At times however, depending upon the size of the deer and the terrain you are in, you haven't much choice. In one instance I was lucky enough to be able to take the car to the kill. On Monday throughout the weekend the large buck I had gotten out of his rut was seen. There could be no mistake judging from his size. It must have been the same one that belonged to the massive tracks Vic had seen along the edge of the corn on our first morning. He was seen and gone as silently and as quickly as he had been seen on every occasion. Twice I passed his bed near the rubbing tree during the next two days. Both times it was warm. Apparently he had heard me coming and eased off into the brush. At night back in camp during supper, the buck always seemed to creep into the conversation. Each of our party having had an experience of seeing him and his mysterious disappearance in each case. It was discussed in the tent while lying in the sleeping bags for the night. Even at the checking station at the courthouse in the town of Oregon while others admired the bucks we had taken, we were still thinking of the big buck back in the woods. Yes, even though the hunt was a success with five bucks taken, on our return trip from the Rock River Country on highway 64 out of Oregon everyone had the big buck on his mind. He still continues to be on our mind and again this year we will return for our next attempt to outfox him.

I can't help feeling that the buck enjoyed leading us a chase and might even be looking forward to us going back. I have no idea about the size of the state record in Illinois, but as sure as the sun rises in the morning our Rock River Spector as we have come to call him, would set a new one. It's strange but it's not the game that you've gotten that gives a hunter his incentive or the stories to tell, but the ones that got away.

EQUIPMENT -- Here are the tools and equipment you will need to load your own shells.

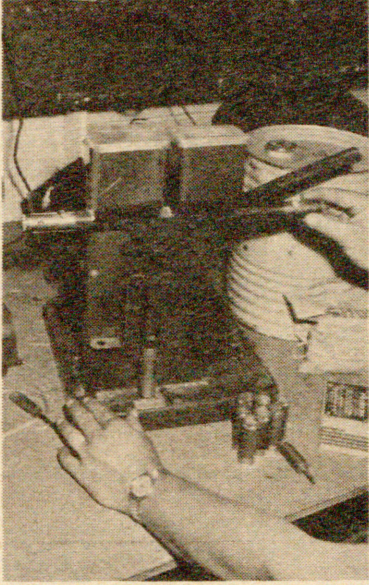

THE BANG--Adding the correct amount of powder is a step in the shell loading operation that must be absolutely accurate.

FOURTH STEP--Installing hard and soft wads over the powder in the shotgun shell allows the rapidly expanding gas pressure to build up when the gun is fired.

SECOND STEP--Recapping with a new primer is the second step in loading your own shotgun shells.

HITTING POWER--Charging of the shot is the operation that determines hitting power and pattern thickness.

Hand Load Your Own Shot Gun Shells, It's Cheaper

Hand loading shotgun shells is relatively simple. Anyone can do it with a minimum expenditure for equipment and materials. For only $25, initial tools of good quality can be purchased. These tools consist of a shot measure, powder measure, sizing die, de-capping and recapping tool, tube and fingers and a crimper.

The materials required to hand-load shotgun shells consist of new or used empty casings, primers, powder, hard wads, felt wads and shot. The initial expense for materials would run approximately ten dollars. It is estimated that the cost of handloading the first 100 shells would run close to that figure. From that point on you can load your own shells for approximately one third the cost of buying them.

FIRST OPERATION

The operations required to load a shell consist of first sizing and then decapping of the old shell casing. If new casings are used, of course this is unnecessary. In the case of a used or new shell the next step is to cap the shell with the new primer. The shell is next put into your tube with fingers to hold the case to size and to hold the case mouth open.

The correct amount of powder according to the desired weight of the shell is then added. At this point it should be mentioned that there are several fine handloading handbooks readily available to the novice. These handbooks specify the correct weights of shot and powder to be used according to gauge.

The next operation is installing the hard wad over the powder. This hard wad acts as a gas seal by helping to build up pressures to eject the shot. Next the soft or felt wads are installed. These absorb the shock of the shot. They not only act as a shock absorber but also help as additional gas sealers.

The next step is to charge the shell with shot according to the desired weight of the shell. The larger the shot the coarser the pattern, but more hitting power is had at longer distances. The final operation consists of crimping. The pattern roll is started and then with average pressure the final crimp is applied and you have a finished shell.

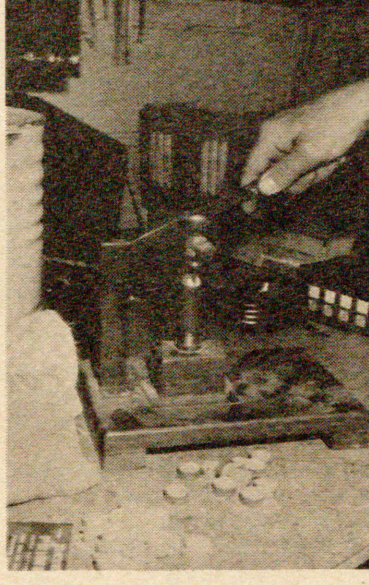

All of this can be done within a period of two to three minutes, but usually one operation at a time is performed using any number of shells at one time. The most important thing for a novice hand-loader to keep in mind is that he must watch the powder weights carefully. An excessive amount of powder could cause your gun to explode, resulting in serious injury.

The wad pressures should be approximately 65 pounds per square inch on application. After loading shells it is also wise to check them in the gun chamber to see that they load freely. The best way to get a good hand load is by experience.

It takes time and it takes experimentation. By varying the amounts of powder and shot charges a gunner can attain the maximum from his gun. A good idea is to set up some targets at approximately 40 yards and start firing your handloads in order to see the shot pattern.

KEEP EXPERIMENTING

Keep experimenting until you obtain a satisfactory pattern. If a person is erratic in his hand-loading his gun shot patterns will be erratic as well. There's a great deal of satisfaction in handloading shotgun shells and it's economical. It's one way of allowing a gun enthusiast to do the shooting he would otherwise be unable to afford. Try loading your own, it's a lot more simple than you think.

LAST STEP--Crimping the cartridge is the last step before trying out the hand loaded shotgun shell.

GOOD WINTER HOBBY -- One of the most satisfying winter hobbies is that of working on your own gun. Here Geoffrey Stoltz of Lockport checks one of his gun stocks.

COOL CATCH -- John Boza of Lockport caught this big northern while he was fishing through the ice of a Minnesota lake last winter.

Swallow Cliff Is Top Notch Winter Sports Attraction

Six gigantic toboggan slides, adequate parking space and a log cabin shelter as well as numerous skiing sites attract thousands of winter sports participants to the Swallow Cliff winter sports area of the Cook County Forest Preserve District. It is the largest in Cook County, and is located at the intersection of Routes 83 and 45 (La Grange road) in the Palos Hills Division of the District.

Other facilities for winter time pleasure are numerous skating areas, and 32 miles of trails for old-fashioned horse-drawn bobsled riding. Palos Hills, consisting of 14,000 acres, is the largest single holding of the Forest Preserve District, the District itself being the largest in the United States close to a metropolis.

The area abounds in all forms of sports, large group picnicking from Decoration Day to Labor Day, and family picnics even before and after, fishing, horseback riding, bicycle riding, hiking, and sites for artists to translate the beauty of the landscape upon their canvases.

The Forest Preserve District was established in 1915, and is operated by the Board of Forest Preserve Commissioners of which Daniel Ryan is president. The Commissioners are authorized by law: "To acquire and hold lands containing natural forests for the purpose of protecting and preserving the flora, fauna and scenic beauties, and to restore, restock, protect and preserve said lands as nearly as may be in their natural state and condition, for the education, pleasure and recreation of the public."

These Palos Hills are the result of the last glacier that pushed its way this far south. The ponds and sloughs lie within potholes resulting from the melting of huge blocks of ice left by that glacier. The city of Chicago is founded on the flat bed of old Lake Chicago, ancestor of Lake Michigan.

UNIQUE FEATURE

The Little Red Schoolhouse nature center, overlooking Longjohn Slough, is a unique feature in the Forest Preserve District program of outdoor education. The indoor exhibits, changing as the seasons change, and the self-guiding nature trails are designed to help people learn more about the out-of-doors and enjoy what they see. It is used by schools and youth groups. In spring, summer and autumn the schoolhouse is open every day from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., including Saturdays and Sundays.

Large concentrations of waterfowl and shorebirds, including ducks, geese and egrets, rest and feed on Longjohn, Saganashkee and McGinnis sloughs during the spring and fall migration periods. Blackberry, dewberry and raspberry patches are plentiful in meadows and woodland openings at many locations and ripe in July. Mushrooms are plentiful in many woodlands during autumn.

Wild prairie roses, some climbing to the tops of hawthorn and crabapple trees, grow along the trail from St. James Church to the site of the original Argonne Laboratory. Spring wildflowers bloom first in Black Partridge Woods which, with its creek & big springs that flow the year around, was a winter retreat and chipping station for Indians.

Pawpaw trees and shingle oaks in Pawpaw Woods is the northern limit of those trees in Illinois. Space bush is also plentiful. Sycamores and an unusually large ironwood (hop hornbeam) tree are impressive at McClaughry Springs; also a sheer cliff of sandy "groundhog" clay deposited by the last glacier. Bank swallows and kingfishers formerly me and kingfishers formerly nested in the sandy clay face of Swallow Cliff, just west of U. S. 45. At Swallow Cliff Woods picnic area there is a grove of white pines planted in the 1920's, a Kentucky Coffeetree and a very large elm at the site of a pioneer home south of 87th St. on the east side of U. S. 45.

Buffalo Woods is so named because it formerly was fenced to enclose a herd of buffalo. Hidden Pond Woods contains an example of a farm pond constructed by the original owner to water his livestock.

STILL SOME PERMITS

Shotgun deer hunting permits are still available for 31 of the 42 counties open for deer hunting in Illinois.

Wise Guy Of The Wild-The Red Fox

Perhaps no animal of the wild has gained respect thru the years like that of the red fox. Even so, those who admire the fox for his cleaveriness do so in a grudging sort of way, and really esteem him more as an adversary worthy of the chase than as a character worthy of respect.

The question of whether the fox does more good by his rodent catching than he does harm by his poultry and game catching tendencies has been debated for years. The fox is closely related to the dog, wolf and jackal, all belonging to the Canidae family.

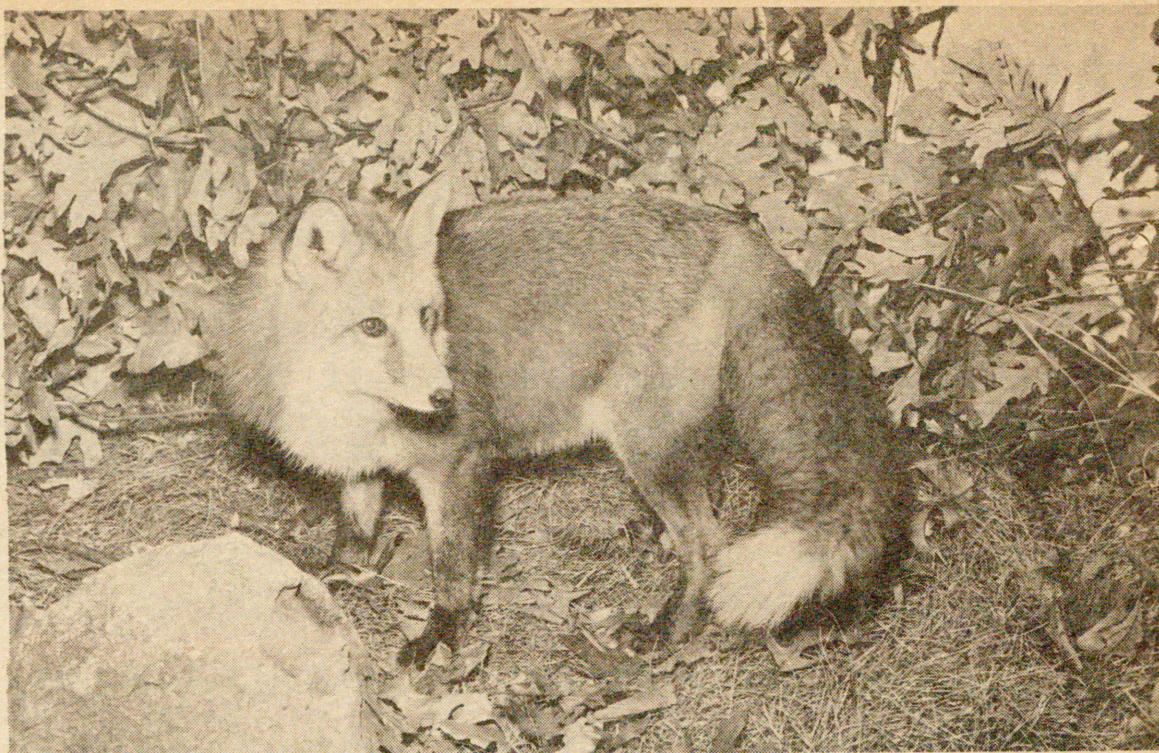

Foxes are smaller, more agile and delicate than are wolves and jackals, with a broader skull and sharper muzzle, large ears, a longer, more bushy tail, and usually with longer fur. Endowed with great swiftness and accustomed to playing the dual role of hunter and hunted, the fox's brain has developed to a high degree and shows capacity for still further development.

QUITE ADAPTABLE

The fox has displayed notable quickness in meeting new problems presented by changes in agricultural practices, and the emergence of man, with his traps, guns and poisons, to the rank of chief enemy -- a comparatively novel state of things. It is this ability of the fox to survive and thrive amid the complexities of modern civilization that brings him into the limelight as a competitor of man, and this has made him the object of much abuse and denunciation.

The red fox inhabits practically the whole northern hemisphere. Our American form is variable in color since its typical yellowish-red color, darkest on the back and shoulders, may either be very bright or pale; or may have the markings on spine and withers very dark and distinct making it a "cross fox", or be totally black with white tipped tail; or black with the tips of most of the hairs white, giving the fur a frosted or silver appearance.

Such variations occur occasionally in wild stock, but have been perpetuated by selective breeding in domestic strains, and are now standard types in ranch foxes. All of these fancy types are merely natural variations of the ordinary red fox. Foxes are natural burrowers and nocturnal hunters of ground-nesting birds from ducks and geese to sparrows, and of their eggs; rodents of every sort; frogs, lizards, snakes and insects; and also of various fruits and berries.

Some of the prey is taken by running it down, some by stalking with crafty caution, some by lying motionless until the victim approaches close enough to be seized by a catlike pounce. The gestation period of the fox is about 51 days, and the young are born in March or April under natural conditions. Both parents share in the care and feeding of the offspring.

LIKES BROKEN COUNTRY

The fox is not a lover of either deep forest or vast prairies. He likes the broken country and always increases with pioneer agriculture. Farmers are enraged by the foxes raids on the poultry house and sportsmen by his fondness for a luscious pheasant or juicy rabbit. The farmer's anger may be somewhat mitigated by his knowledge that the fox eats a large number of rodents.

Fox hunts are organized with the purpose of getting rid of foxes, the sport of fox hunting being relegated to second place. In many states the fox chase itself takes first place as the major objective. In fact, in some states, where fox hunting is taken seriously as a traditional sport, anyone who suggest killing the fox at the end of the chase is socially ostracized, if not actually subjected to bodily injury.

Thus it may seem that the red fox has his friends as well as his enemies. Like most of us, he has his good points and his bad ones. The conclusion drawn on the fox depends upon who's side of the fence you're sitting on. Is he your friend or foe?

For Tough Shooting Try The Ringneck

Reports of rural mail carriers indicate the pheasant populations of northern Illinois are at least equal in number to last year's birds. This year's season, opening at noon Nov. 11, again offers the three bird limit to Illinois hunters.

The cock pheasant in recent years has become the most popular of any game hunted in the state. This includes the cottontail rabbit. The pheasant is a wily bird and offers more than enough sport to the hunter and often comes out best in a game of hide and seek. The best way of hunting the ringneck is by the old standby of driving.

This is an ideal system when hunting with a group and converging on a corn, bean or stubble field. For best action the corn rows should be worked slow and methodically. Any areas containing water attract pheasants. Drainage ditches, brooks, potholes and farm ponds with heavy cover nearby will generally have pheasants.

WINDY DAY HINTS

On windy days work slough bottoms and weedy swales. In the afternoon look for the ringnecks in their favorite loafing areas along hedgerows, plum thickets, meadow edges, swales, deserted farmyards or near abandoned buildings. Late in the afternoon birds can usually be found in their nesting areas which consist of sweet clover, stubble and sloughs.

Grassy pockets and dusting spots are also good. Pheasant hunting is a game of hide and seek. It's a case of outthinking the bird and he's no fool. In bad weather such as light, drizzly rains, or after a light snowfall birds generally squat more. Flushing them is usually a simple matter. In stubble fields drive. Work the area in a way that will make the birds flush when pushed against an opening such as a plowed field.

Forcing them toward water is another good idea. In large brushy fields such as beans or corn drive across the fields in zig zag fashion. This method usually covers the field like a blanket and here a good dog earns his keep.

Good things to keep in mind are when driven upwind, pheasants usually veer back giving the drivers the shooting. If the blockers are down wind, drivers will flush the ringnecks up over them.

Remember that birds only fly as a last resort so work the cover down to the very end. When trying to locate birds, binoculars work fine when prowling the back roads.

Stop frequently and "glass" any likely looking pheasant hiding spot. You'll be surprised at the birds you spot which would have been overlooked otherwise. If birds are located in this manner be sure and request permission of the landowner to hunt the property. Above all don't trespass.

TAKE IT EASY

If you hunt ringnecks by yourself and you don't own a dog don't just walk thru the fields at a normal gait. Birds will merely run ahead of you and rarely will take to the air. Instead, ease into known pheasant areas. Take four or five steps and stop.

Repeat this often and otherwise travel very slowly. Fidgety birds, figuring they've been spotted, often flush. This year when hunting pheasants don't hunt just any cover at any time. Take into consideration the time of day, weather conditions and try to determine what you would be doing at that time of the day if you were a pheasant. This might seem far-fetched, but before you pass judgment give it a try.

Ducks Continue To Decline

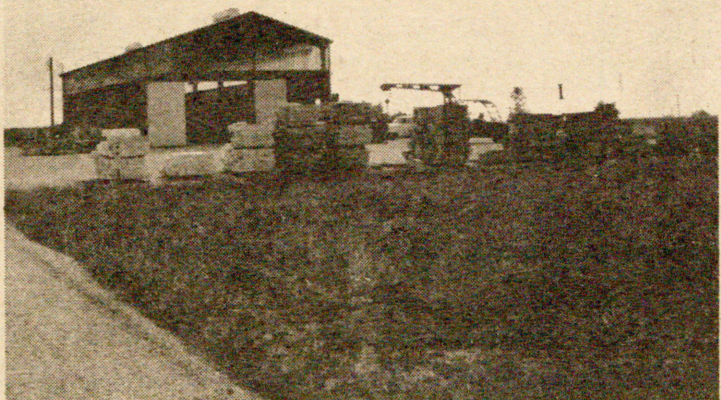

The Department of the Interior predicted that production of ducks would be a "bust". Subsequent surveys indicated that the predictions were accurate.

The reduced population of birds returning northward this spring found water conditions much improved over a substantial part of their breeding territory, though severe drouth conditions in some rather important areas in Saskatchewan and Alberta still prevailed. This spotty situation remained relatively unchanged throughout the summer, with the result that the Department of the Interior predicted a southward migration this fall of about the same number of birds as last year for the three eastern flyways, with a pronounced reduction to be expected in the Pacific flyway.

Abundant Raccoon's Curiosity Will Help Trap Him For You

OUTDOOR LIVING
Fall and Winter Supplement
October 27, 1960 Page 7

The raccoon is a medium-sized animal resembling a bear in shape but much smaller. It has a pointed nose, pointed ears, and a rather long bushy tail. Raccoons walk on the soles of the hind feet, using the heel as human beings do. They are a dull, brownish grey in color and the long or guard hairs of the fur are black tipped on the back. They also have a black spot each cheek and eye. The tail has six or seven rings of dark brown on a pale, yellowish background. The raccoon is found in the United States wherever there is a heavy growth of dense, hardwood timber along river, streams, or lakes.

In the timber he selects a hollow tree for a home, doing his hunting mostly at night. The streams, ponds and woods furnish him an abundance of food. He is a good climber, being perfectly at home in the trees as well as on the ground.

He dens up during the most severe winter weather but occasionally, on warm nights, will come out to look for food. Young raccoons are usually born in April or May and number from three to six, four being the average. The young are nursed by the mother until old enough to leave the den and go with the parents in search of food. The raccoon eats both animal and vegetable food, such as fish, frogs, clams, fowl, insects, fruits, nuts, grain, (especially corn) and vegetables.

The main diet is probably frogs, clams, crayfish, etc. He is a regular visitor to corn fields from the time the ears are in milk until the corn is harvested and safely stored away in cribs. At times he even goes there for his supper.

As a fur bearer the raccoon ranks high. Prime skins usually command a good price. The fur is deep and warm and wears very well. The raccoon is not difficult to trap. His curiosity usually gets the better of him and bright objects of a shiny nature placed on the pan of a trap many times prove his downfall. Traps should be set along natural runways and be baited with fish, frogs, corn or other food which the raccoon likes. This animal has the habit of running along tree trunks or branches by streams, and a stick or limb placed across such a log so the raccoon will be forced to jump over it, with the trap on the other side so placed that he will step into it, is an effective way of taking him. A number 1 1/2 trap is satisfactory and will not injure him.

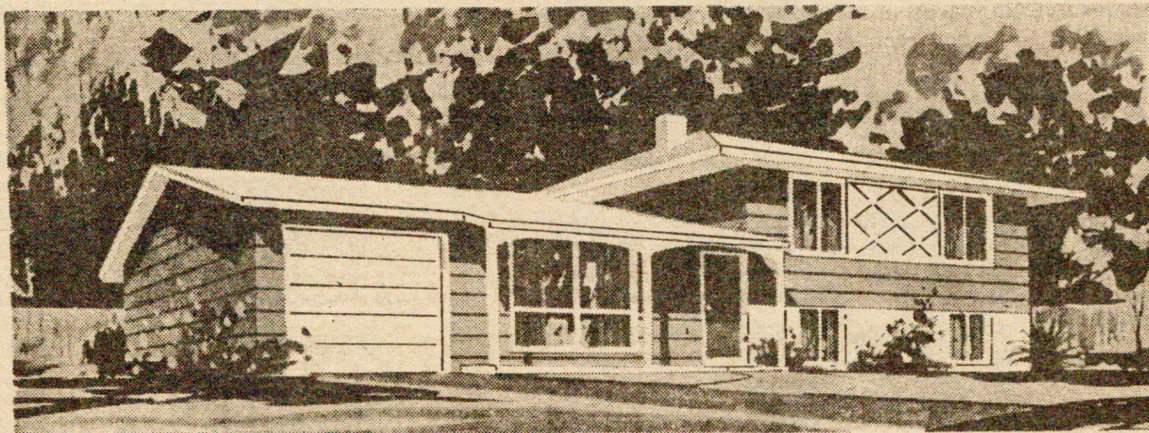

Curiosity is the raccoon's middle name.

New Lenox Recreation Club Dedicated To Outdoor Life

It took a dream by a bunch of sportsmen and tenacity to get the job done, but today the New Lenox Recreation Club is fast developing into one of the finest in the area. Located three miles South of Wilmington, this club offers three fine strip mine lakes to its members.

Having been stocked by a game biologist, these lakes have been proven to be in fine balance and some real "lunker" bass have been taken from them. The largest to date weighed over six pounds and was taken by Stan Ekdahl of New Lenox.

The past spring, the club was host to Will County's first fish derby which consisted of a contest between the top bass fishermen in the county. The club intends to make this an annual event. Since purchasing the property the club members have built roads giving members easy access to all their fishing lakes, planted a number of evergreens, built a fine bathing beach, dug a well, laid out a campground and accomplished many other things all in the space of only four years.

MANY OTHER ACTIVITIES

In addition, such activities as fish derbies for youngsters who were paid for every fish they caught, to free Red Cross first aid courses are being offered. This past summer the club membership voted to hold a guest day, open to the public, wherein any family who was interested could visit the club grounds and take advantage of the facilities there.

This was enthusiastically received and taken advantage of by many families in Will County. The New Lenox Recreation Club has shown in more than one respect that they are developing their grounds for the maximum enjoyment of everyone. No constructive recommendation is overlooked and no stone is left unturned in their efforts to please the outdoorsman and his family.

Who are the people responsible for creating this drive that has developed the club to such an extent in such a short time? They are too numerous to mention and even if it were possible to list the individuals by name they wouldn't want it. They're just a fine bunch of sportsmen named Joe who want a place to visit, to enjoy picnicing, fishing, boating, camping and swimming.
